

The IRS to Accept Most 2012 Tax Filings Beginning January 30

Due to the changes in the tax law prompted by the recently enacted American Taxpayer Relief Act of 2012 (ATRA), the IRS has announced it will begin accepting 2012 tax filings on January 30. The IRS had anticipated a January 22 start date. However, forms and processes must be updated in response to the ATRA, necessitating the delay. And filing paper returns won't speed up the process either. The IRS suggests filers use e-file with direct deposit for faster tax refunds.

Most households may begin filing tax returns on January 30. However, some filers may not have their returns processed until late February or March because of the need for more extensive form and processing system changes. Filers claiming residential energy credits, depreciation of property, or general business credits may not be able to file until a later date to be announced by the IRS. A full listing of the forms that won't be accepted until later is available on the IRS website, www.irs.gov.

---

IMPORTANT DISCLOSURES

Broadridge Investor Communication Solutions, Inc. does not provide investment, tax, or legal advice. The information presented here is not specific to any individual's personal circumstances.

To the extent that this material concerns tax matters, it is not intended or written to be used, and cannot be used, by a taxpayer for the purpose of avoiding penalties that may be imposed by law. Each taxpayer should seek independent advice from a tax professional based on his or her individual circumstances.

These materials are provided for general information and educational purposes based upon publicly available information from sources believed to be reliable—we cannot assure the accuracy or completeness of these materials. The information in these materials may change at any time and without notice.